Sorry, we encountered a problem joining this video call.

You can't create a meeting yourself. If you're joining a meeting from Google Classroom, wait for your teacher to join and then refresh this page.

Return to home screen

If a student clicks the Classroom-Meet integrated link before the teacher is in the meeting they will be presented this error window and can wait for their teacher's office hours and click 'Reload'.

If the student clicks 'Reload' once their teacher joins the meeting they will be presented with this window and can join as well.

The screenshot shows a Google Meet interface. On the left, there is a large black rectangular area with the text "Camera is off" in white. At the bottom of this area are three circular buttons: a white one with a microphone icon, a red one with a camera icon, and a black one with three dots. To the right of this area, the meeting ID "fw634c6tbh" is displayed above a list of participants. The first participant listed is "Demo Teacher is in this call", accompanied by a small profile picture. Below the participant list are two buttons: a teal "Join now" button and a white "Present" button with a camera icon. Further down, there is a link labeled "Other options" and another link labeled "Join and use a phone for audio" with a phone icon.

I can share my Classroom-integrated Meet link in the classroom stream or through email with my students as well ... but why not just make it visible in the header?! They can't join without you in the room -- and as long as you're the last one out they can't rejoin it as well.

I can also share a Meet nickname in my classroom stream or through email with my students like this:

Class: Our Meet nickname will be our class code of "ir[REDACTED]ca".
or
Class: Our Meet nickname will be "5thHourScience"

Demo Student 8:00 AM

If a student visits meet.google.com and attempts to join a nickname or "ir[REDACTED]ca" or "5thHourScience" they will either be redirected to a "You can't join this call" page if the teacher is not in the Meet yet and the nickname is still active or be presented with a "You're not allowed to start a meeting" error in the lower-left corner if the nickname has expired.

Sharing the web address that results from entering a nicknamed Meet in a classroom post will still prevent students from being able to join without a teacher.

Sharing a blank, non-nicknamed Meet meeting link with students is a bad idea.

Students can join the meeting without a teacher present and then they can just share that link with anyone else in their school system and have unsupervised voice/video chat.

If they share it externally, at least it'll require the teacher approval -- but it can be very easy to just blindly 'Admit' people into your meeting, so click with caution and only if you expect external people to join your meeting.

Ok ... this is looking good and I don't see an issue worth all these screenshots.
What if I create a meeting, but I don't give it a nickname and leave that blank ... and then I copy/paste the address bar that says: [https://meet.google.com/ejb-\[REDACTED\]-help](https://meet.google.com/ejb-[REDACTED]-help)

Demo Student 8:29 AM
Yeah ... sooo ... the student can click this non-nicknamed link and enter the Meet without another participant and the teacher account never even joined the Meet! The student can leave and rejoin this meeting as well with no participants.
In addition, the student can share this link with other students in the same school system and they can join without an adult present.
At least if they share the link with students outside their school system or a personal gmail address that outsider will have to wait for the teacher to allow them in and cannot just join and disrupt the meeting. However, if the teacher blindly clicks 'Admit' without verifying who the user is that is trying to join then we could have problems on our hands. In general teachers should click 'Deny' unless they plan to have outsiders joining the meeting.

This style of link should NOT be shared with students!

This is a demo calendar event with Meet link for a future date.

Sharing a Calendar generated Meet meeting link with students is a bad idea.

Just because you schedule a Calendar appointment with a Meet meeting it does not mean that the meeting has education protection on it.

If you share a calendar link with students they can enter the meeting without a teacher before or after the scheduled meeting.

Well ... that's unfortunate for all the folks who shared non-nicknamed Meet links with students.

If they posted in their Class stream they could delete the post.

If they emailed the link their students then you will likely have to wait for that link to auto-expire, which I've heard some colleagues tell me can live up to 90 days after the last participant left?

What about if I create calendar events for myself so I can stay organized? I see that I can add a Meet video conference to it and meet.google.com was trying to tell me to do that too ...

I wonder what the student can do with my calendar generated Meet link:

BTW: Today is Monday and this calendar event and Meet link is for Friday from 12:00-1:00 so the link will only work during that timeframe right? Seems logical to a standard user who is trying to be thoughtful about protecting their students but also structuring their own calendar...

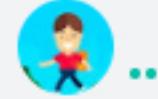

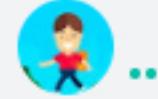

Demo Student 8:41 AM

Unfortunately it doesn't work the way a teacher might assume it works. This link is active as soon as it's generated ... so on Monday morning my student account can click the link and join without a teacher present. I can also invite fellow classmates in my school system.

This link will also work for a period of time AFTER the scheduled meeting time.

At least any outsiders still require the 'Admin' click from the teacher.

In addition, if my teacher shares a blank, non-nicknamed Meet meeting link or Calendar generated Meet meeting link with me, then I can share that link with any other students in my school system and they can also join at any time they feel like it.

Moral of the story?
Do not share blank, non-nicknamed or calendar generated Meet meeting links.
Only share nicknamed or Classroom-Meet integrated Meet meeting links with students to protect them and your school system.

Ok. I understand how to keep my students safe now.

To reiterate, I can:

- turn on the Classroom-Meet integration to generate a unique link for this class
- decide whether or not it's displayed at all times for students (but why wouldn't I?)
- share the Classroom-Meet integration generated link in a class steam or in email with students or I can:

- create a nicknamed Meet and share the nickname with students

but ... I SHOULD NOT:

- share a blank, non-nicknamed Meet meeting link with students
- share a Calendar generated Meet meeting link with students

How bad is it? How many teachers have already shared non-nicknamed Meet meeting links or Calendar generated Meet meeting links with students?

Demo Teacher 8:54 AM

Yes. Exactly ... who in the world knows?!

Sure would be nice if Google could protect teacher created non-nicknamed Meet meeting links and Calendar generated Meet meeting links in the same way they protected nicknamed Meet meeting links on March 19th.
